

Northville Academic Games Player Code of Conduct

- 1. Core Values: Passion, Integrity, Excellent, Teamwork, and Fun. Players should uphold and demonstrate these fundamental values while in the program. See appendix for detailed explanation of these values.
- 2. Practices. AG players are expected to attend weekly practice. If a player is sick or has other personal issues that cannot be at practice, parent should communicate to coaches ahead of time.
- 3. Behavior. Classroom manners are expected during any AG event, including practices and tournament. Follow tournament host rules as requested.
- 4. Sportsmanship. Because AG is a face to face competition like sports, players are expected with good sportsmanship: play fair; be a team player; stay positive; keep trash talk to a minimum; lose gracefully, win with class; respect rulings of officials.

Northville Academic Games Mission Statement and Core Values

The mission of the Northville Academic Games is to provide a nurturing and focused environment for students to develop their intellectual capacities as well as maturing into responsible individuals through fun games and friendly competitions. We cultivate positive attitude and fairness in players who can win with class and lose with grace. Our core values are Passion, Integrity, Excellence, Team Work and Fun.

Passion for the games and learning - we want our players to love what they do, and have a passion for it. If a student doesn't want to do (even though parents may want to), that player should not be in the program.

Integrity - Integrity reflects who we are as a person, be a player, or coach, or parent. Integrity will earn trust and respect, and will help us do the right thing.

Excellence - We want to do the best of what we can. It requires hard work, but also brings pride and promotes self-confidence.

Teamwork - A commitment to common goals while showing concern and support for each other.

Fun - It's extremely important that the program is fun to be part of. Fun can come from the friendship between all of those involved, from an extended competition trip, or from a celebration party
